

PREPARE YOUR LIVESTOCK FOR EMERGENCIES

All livestock owners have a responsibility to make sure their animals are prepared for emergencies.

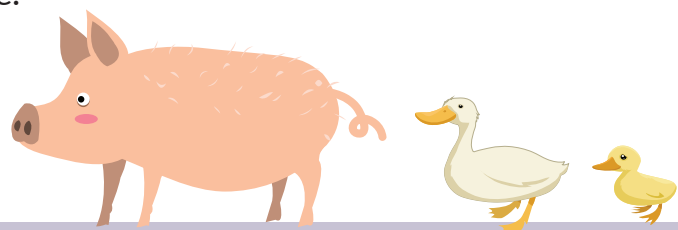

Prepare for an emergency

- Check whether local arrangements cater for relocation of livestock.
- Coordinate livestock relocation with neighbours, friends or livestock associations as early as possible.
- Fit gates on internal fences to avoid moving livestock on public roads.
- If you have to relocate your livestock, make sure you have completed all National Livestock Identification System requirements.
- Make sure your NT Property Identification Code (PIC) is up to date.

Leaving livestock in an emergency

- In a severe storm or cyclone, place livestock under solid cover, such as a stable, shed or covered yard.
- In a flood, move livestock to high ground with adequate natural feed.
- Check your fences are secure.
- Leave food and water for at least five days.
- Tie down or store loose objects.

www.securent.nt.gov.au

Have a plan, don't wait until it is too late!